Top 270 Spas

IN NORTH AMERICA, THE CARIBBEAN, HAWAII, AND AT SEA—GO AHEAD, BE PAMPERED!

Here are the results of 22 years of research—we're not kidding. Readers who participated in this poll had a total of 46,352 visits to hotel, resort, and cruise ship spas. If each visit lasted one hour, it would take a solitary spa-goer 22 years to repeat the feat (based on 40-hour "work weeks"). The results here are, however, a collective effort, and a place on these lists is a distinction earned only after many visits by many Condé Nast Traveler readers. Now please get back on that massage table, and continue to share what you find by logging on to condenasttraveler.com/vote.

● CHILL OUT

The power of cold temperatures to reduce inflammation and soothe aches and pains has long been known and perhaps most famously embraced by Finns, who follow their time in a sauna with a plunge in icy water. Today, many spas are finding new ways to incorporate the healing powers of cold in treatments. Maui's Mandara Spa at Wailea Beach Marriott Resort, for example, has an Ice-Goddess Facial that uses super-cooling procedures to rejuvenate skin ($179), and Boston's Mandarin Oriental takes a do-it-yourself approach, with an ice fountain from which guests can grab frosty handfuls to apply to sore areas. Other spas are also contrasting hot and cold to enhance therapies. The Big Island's Mauna Lani Spa has a Fire & Ice Package that includes 50 minutes in its Lava Sauna and a signature Fire & Ice Facial ($495), while the Inn at Palmetto Bluff's Steamy Pine Purification follows a detoxifying warm wrap with a circulation-stimulating cold one (2 hours; $310). ▶
